2. ( ) The target was the rustic home of Ulysses S. Grant, the 18th President of the United States. Now restored, the structure lies within a tourist park near St. Louis, MO. A secondary target was the Gateway Arch, a tall curved arch signifying the gateway to the West.
3. ( ) Source began by describing a structure in a breezy, hilly area with a generally open feeling about it. This structure was correctly reported as being "square, sloping, monumental, fenced in by a "short (low)" fence, divided (room? or perhaps the effect of the stacked logs?, and associated with a man". Source further correctly described the purpose of this structure as being someplace to visit to, "look, to wander about," and to view "awards, medals and displays". In a trip back in time, Source correctly associated this structure with an important person who, "wore a blue uniform and was associated with a terrible war (the US Civil War of 1860+).
4. ( ) After being returned to the current time period, Source was "moved" to the secondary target, the Gateway Arch, and correctly identified this site as being, "circular (the curved effect of the Arch or possibly the adjacent sports stadium), dedication, high, overwhelming, modern, two halves exactly like making the whole, a mirrored image (which very accurately describes the actual symmetry of the Arch). Some unrelated descriptives concerning the Arch were insignificant and had little affect on actual target recognition.
5. ( ) Based on the very concise descriptives given by Source there can be no doubt that she was able to successfully acquire the proper sites and accurately describe the major components of the targets in such a manner that an analyst (or the Interviewer) would have no difficulty in correlating these perceptions to the actual target.

OLYMPIAN.

125 yrs ago

I first sensed that I was in an opened area. I sensed a circular movement. I sensed a large square on the ground slopping down or slanting down. I felt the structure was not old. I sensed women working in the structure and I sensed awards on display in the structure. I had a feeling of people working. I sensed that a man was somehow associated with this building. I also sensed a fencing of some sort. Not high, but short fencing.

When I went back 140 years, I sensed the man was alone in a small, closed area thinking, pondering, wondering and working and researching. I sensed people were happy and celebrating as they danced around a flame.

When I went back 125 years, I had a sense of a war and sensed weaponry & a blue uniform. I did not know if the man was in the war or if these were given to him or if they were souvenirs of his.

When back in this time, I was asked to move NE and I noted another structure which was new and had a layering effect. I sensed this but structure had 2 halves alike and I sensed mirror imagery.
